The New England First Amendment Coalition thanks The Providence Journal Charitable Legacy Fund for its continued support of the New England First Amendment Institute.

This year’s program is provided in large part due to the fund’s dedication to improving the quality of journalism throughout the region and to offering our 2017 Fellows the tools and knowledge needed to become stronger watchdogs.

On behalf of NEFAC, thank you.
Dear 2017 NEFAI Fellow,

Congratulations on being selected to attend this year’s New England First Amendment Institute. Since 2011, we have provided this exclusive annual three-day investigative journalism training to some of the best and brightest journalists in the region. You are in very good company.

Previous Fellows have taken what they’ve learned at NEFAI and helped their newsrooms break compelling investigatory news stories. Former Fellow Meghan Foley, for example, said NEFAI helped her “become a resource for reporters and editors when it comes to formulating public record requests, knowing what records are publicly available and how best to analyze data.” Foley will speak on Day Two about her six-article series that ran in the Keene Sentinel examining the deficiencies of a regional medical response team. She’ll be joined by former Fellows Kyle Jones of WMTW-Portland and Susan Spencer of the Worcester Telegram & Gazette, both with their own stories to share.

In all, 36 elite reporters, editors, media attorneys and FOI experts volunteered their time this year to help you write your success stories.

For the next three days we will be working together to become stronger and more aggressive watchdogs. We will hear each other’s experiences, our successes and failures, and take the lessons we learn back to our newsrooms to share with colleagues. We will fight relentlessly for information and report stories the public needs to know. We will inform our communities in new and compelling ways. We will remind our readers, viewers and listeners why watchdog journalism is needed now more than ever.

Congrats again on being selected as a 2017 New England First Amendment Institute Fellow. Please let me know if there is anything we can do to help you accomplish your goals during the next three days.

I wish you a very productive Institute.

Sincerely,

Justin Silverman, Esq.
Executive Director
WHAT IS NEFAI?
The New England First Amendment Institute is an intensive training course for working journalists on freedom of information laws and investigative techniques now in its seventh year. By bringing together highly acclaimed media lawyers and award-winning journalists, we offer our 25 Fellows a rich and collegial training program to help them improve their watchdog journalism.

WHY IS IT NEEDED?
We believe that the media — newspapers, television, radio and online journalism — are part of the fabric of our culture in important ways. However, media hampered by fewer investigative resources to tackle the real needs of our society — education, health care, economic development, affordable housing and public safety, among others — will not be effective in connecting people to civic life or serving as a vehicle for social betterment. Particularly suffering from the economic forces of our times are smaller media outlets, where the economic downturn has significantly reduced staffing and eliminated training budgets. Enter the New England First Amendment Institute, a non-profit educational endeavor created to offer a rigorous, intensive and tuition-free training course that media organizations desperately need for their staffs but cannot provide and do not have the manpower to organize.

ABOUT OUR HOST
Northeastern University is generously providing a home for NEFAI 2017. For more than 40 years, the university’s School of Journalism has combined academic excellence with practical experience, preparing students to be analytical thinkers and successful communicators. The New England First Amendment Coalition is extremely grateful for Northeastern’s assistance and contributions to the Institute. We encourage you to learn more about the university by visiting www.northeastern.edu.

SOCIAL MEDIA
While at the Institute, please share what you learn via Twitter and other social media using the following hashtag: #NEFAI2017 After the event, all contributions will be compiled via Storify and distributed to attendees for future reference. Please also connect with NEFAC in the following ways:

James W. Foley Scholarship

The New England First Amendment Coalition established the James W. Foley Scholarship in February 2015 to honor the slain journalist and New Hampshire native. A seasoned war correspondent for Boston-based GlobalPost, James Foley committed himself to the truth and, in his words, “exposing untold stories.” While working in Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya and Syria, Foley reported on the lives of those disadvantaged and suffering. His barbaric death in 2014 reminded the nation of the dangers of his craft and the threats against freedom of information.

According to the James W. Foley Foundation:

James W. Foley envisioned a world that respects the dignity and life of each person, regardless of socioeconomic status, cultural background or nationality. His life demonstrated an uncompromising commitment to the freedom of the press and to advocacy for basic human rights.

In honor of James, NEFAC’s James W. Foley Scholarship provides funding for one Fellow to attend the Institute without travel or lodging expenses. To learn more about James and the organization his family founded in his name, please visit www.jamesfoleyfoundation.org.

THE ROBERTSON FOUNDATION

for its generosity and continued support of the First Amendment, the public’s right to know and the education of journalists throughout New England.

Your support makes us a stronger organization and will help this year’s New England First Amendment Institute become the most successful yet.

Thank you.
DAVID BARBOZA
Correspondent, The New York Times

David Barboza is a correspondent for The New York Times, based in New York. In 2013, Barboza was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for International Reporting “for his striking exposure of corruption at high levels of the Chinese government, including billions in secret wealth owned by relatives of the prime minister, well documented work published in the face of heavy pressure from the Chinese officials.” He was also part of the team that won the 2008 Grantham Prize for environmental reporting for the series “Choking on Growth: China’s Environmental Crisis.” In 2002, he was part of a team that was named a finalist for a Pulitzer Prize for coverage of the Enron scandal. In 2008, Barboza won The Times’s internal business award, the Nathaniel Nash Award. He has twice won the Gerald Loeb Award for business reporting. Barboza graduated from Boston University with a bachelor’s degree in history and attended Yale University Graduate School.

BRIAN MCGORRY
Editor, The Boston Globe

Brian McGrory, who worked as an award-winning metro columnist and White House correspondent over his 27 years at The Boston Globe, is currently the editor. The news organization has won four Pulitzer Prizes — for breaking news in its coverage of the Marathon bombings, for feature photography, for commentary, and for editorial writing — since he became editor in late 2012. McGrory has authored four published novels and a book about his family’s pet rooster.

KATHLEEN CARROLL
Executive Editor, The Associated Press (formerly)

Kathleen Carroll is the board chair of the Committee to Protect Journalists, a global organization that helps endangered journalists and advocates for press freedoms. From 2002 through 2016, Carroll was executive editor and senior vice president of The Associated Press. As the top news executive of the world’s largest independent news agency, she was responsible for coverage from journalists in more than 100 countries, including groundbreaking new bureaus in North Korea and Myanmar. She gave that coverage a new sophistication while meeting the evolving demands of its worldwide audience. Carroll is a fierce advocate for a robust independent press and a frequent speaker on the threats to journalistic access. She also is a leader on vital security issues for journalists working in hostile environments. She has served on the CPJ board since 2008. From 2003 to 2012, she was a member of the Pulitzer Prize Board, the last year as co-chair. At AP, Carroll led coverage of conflicts across the Middle East, a wrenching global recession and its aftermath, four U.S. presidential elections, countless natural disasters, and tales of human folly and endurance. She fostered a spirit of innovation and reorganized the global news structure to create more time for newsgathering and more opportunities for a wide range of journalists. Under her leadership, AP journalists won numerous awards, among them five Pulitzer Prizes — including the 2016 Pulitzer for Public Service — six George Polk Awards and 15 Overseas Press Club Awards. Before taking the top job at AP, Carroll led the Knight Ridder Washington bureau and worked for the AP in Washington, Los Angeles and Dallas. She was an editor at the International Herald Tribune and the San Jose Mercury News and a reporter at the Dallas Morning News in her hometown. She is married to author Steve Twomey, and they are the proud parents of an adult son, Nicholas Twomey.

Mike Beaudet is an investigative reporter who has worked in television for more than 20 years and a professor at Northeastern University. He is a multimedia investigative journalist at WCVB-TV in Boston where he works as part of the “5 Investigates” team. At Northeastern, Beaudet is currently researching the viewership challenges facing local television newscasts across the country and experimenting with new methods of video storytelling to find better ways to engage audiences. Beaudet started his career in radio covering politics at the Massachusetts State House and also made stops at television stations in Bangor, Me., and Manchester, N.H. Before joining WCVB he was an investigative reporter and anchor at WFXT-TV FOX25 in Boston. Beaudet is known for his hard-hitting investigations and specializes in stories about government waste and corruption. He has won numerous awards, including 16 New England Emmy Awards. In 2016, Beaudet won the New England Emmy for Outstanding Investigative Report for a composite of stories, two of which were produced with Northeastern students in his investigative reporting class. His reporting has also been recognized repeatedly by the Associated Press and the Radio Television Digital News Association. A graduate of Emerson College, Mike earned his master’s degree from Northeastern University. His master’s thesis examined the undue influence some news organizations place on journalists when they put business interests ahead of the public’s right to know. Beaudet taught journalism at Emerson College and Northeastern before joining Northeastern as a Professor of the Practice in 2014. He’s a Massachusetts native who lives outside Boston with his wife and two children.

Robert A. Bertsche represents companies and individuals engaged in online, print, and electronic media, including newspapers, magazines, websites, bloggers, book publishers, broadcasters, and filmmakers, among others. A partner at the Boston law firm of Prince Lobel Tye LLP, he serves as outside general counsel to the New England Newspaper & Press Association and the New England First Amendment Coalition and is on legal advisory board to the Student Press Law Center. He chairs Prince Lobel’s media and intellectual property practice groups, which provide services including pre-publication and pre-broadcast review; litigation and advice in such areas as libel, access, privacy, reporters’ privilege, copyright and trademark infringement; and counsels on issues including website compliance, social media, sweepstakes, and advertising. He works closely with Prince Lobel’s employment, corporate, insurance, criminal law, and real estate lawyers to provide a wide gamut of services to media clients nationwide. A graduate of Wesleyan University and Harvard Law School, Bertsche worked as a daily newspaper reporter and magazine editor before deciding his future might be brighter as a lawyer. He has been listed as one of the “Best Lawyers in America” every year since 2006, and has been repeatedly granted “super lawyer” status as well.

Dieter Bradbury is deputy managing editor/news at the Portland Press Herald/Maine Sunday Telegram. He oversees the paper’s city desk and metro coverage, and directs several special beat reporters assigned to health care, energy, the environment, and state government. He also leads the database team in producing databases and data visualizations for the newspaper’s web products. Before he became an editor in 2010, Bradbury worked for 21 years as a reporter at the Press Herald, covering the municipal, public safety, general assignment and environmental beats. His reporting work has won numerous awards from the Maine Press Association, and he was a finalist for the national Edward J. Meeman and John B. Oakes awards in 1997 for a series of stories on the threat of mercury pollution to the Maine environment. Bradbury is the editor of a year-long special project on the aging of Maine’s population, The Challenge of Our Age, which won national awards this year from the Scripps Howard Foundation, the Society of Features Journalism and Associated Press Media Editors. He attended the University of Redlands in California and is a 1980 graduate of the University of Southern Maine with a degree in communication.

Peter J. Caruso, Sr., has represented the media in some of the most high-profile court cases in Massachusetts history since 1977. Caruso has represented print professionals in a vast spectrum of media litigation, including defamation, media and the Internet law, newspaper access, advertising acceptance, news reporting, copyright and publications law. A Massachusetts Bar Fellow and a member of the American Bar Association and its Forum on Communications Law, Caruso has argued cases before the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, the Massachusetts Appeals Court, and the U.S. Court of Appeals. Caruso has also represented media organizations throughout New England, including the New England Newspaper Association and the New England Press Association, and was media counsel in the Willie Horton, Pam Smart, and Alan Eagleson cases. Caruso has been inducted into the New England Newspaper Hall of Fame.

Michael Donoghue is an award-winning news and sports writer. He worked for more than 40 years at the Burlington Free Press and now is a freelancer. He was selected as the 2013 New England Journalist of the Year by the New England Society of News Editors and in 2015 received the Matthew Lyon First Amendment Award. Donoghue has been an adjunct professor of journalism and mass communications at St. Michael’s College in Colchester, Vt. since 1985. Donoghue has served as an officer, including executive director, with the Vermont Press Association since 1979. He is a former board member for the New England Press Association and has served continuously as state chairman of Project Sunshine in Vermont since it was started by the Society of Professional Journalists in 1990. Donoghue is often credited as being a driving force behind the improvement to Vermont’s open government (public records and meetings) legislation. He has made his own successful legal arguments to judges about keeping courtrooms open and not sealing court documents. Donoghue and the Free Press have been honored for his work on a local, state, regional and national level. Donoghue was selected in 2007 as the winner of the Yankee Quill Award, the top lifetime honor for print and electronic journalism in New England. He has been inducted into five Halls of Fame, including as a charter member for the New England Press Association’s Hall of Fame and as a charter member for the Society of Professional Journalists/National Freedom of Information Coalition Hall of Fame. The New England First Amendment Coalition’s annual Freedom of Information Award in New England is named after Donoghue and he was recently elected vice president of the organization.

LIA ERNST

Attorney, ACLU of Vermont

Lia Ernst is a staff attorney at the American Civil Liberties Union of Vermont, where she litigates civil liberties, civil rights, and open government cases; advocates before state and municipal governmental bodies on ACLU legislative priorities; and educates community groups on protecting and exercising their rights. Before coming to the Vermont affiliate, Ernst had been a legal fellow at the ACLU of Massachusetts and a legal intern at the ACLU of Michigan. She also clerked for two years with U.S. District Court Judge Julian Abele Cook Jr. in Detroit and for one year with Judge Norman H. Stahl of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in Boston. In between, she was an associate attorney at a Michigan law firm outside Detroit, focusing on criminal defense and attorney ethics. Ernst is a graduate of the University of Michigan Law School and holds a master’s degree in anthropology from the University of Wisconsin. Her undergraduate degree is from Swarthmore College, where she majored in biology. She served two years in the Peace Corps in Guinea, West Africa after college.

ERIC EYRE

Statehouse Reporter, Charleston Gazette-Mail

Eric Eyre is a statehouse reporter for the Charleston (W.Va.) Gazette-Mail. He joined the newspaper in 1998, after working as an intern at the Tampa Bay Times. At the Gazette-Mail, he has covered education, health and business. Eyre’s work has won several national awards, including the Pulitzer Prize for Investigative Reporting in April. His articles tracked the deluge of prescription painkillers into West Virginia, following them into individual counties, pharmacies and families.

MEGHAN FOLEY

Copy Editor and Environment Reporter, The Keene Sentinel

Meghan Foley began her reporting career nine years ago, starting at the former North Adams Transcript in western Massachusetts. There she reported extensively on the effects flooding from Tropical Storm Irene had on a mobile home park and brought to light a possible cancer cluster involving students who attended an area high school. She has continued her career at The Keene Sentinel in southwestern New Hampshire. She is a northeastern Massachusetts native, and a 2008 graduate of Keene State College. Since returning to New Hampshire in 2012, Foley has had the opportunity to cover two presidential elections for The Sentinel, investigate alleged misconduct by a college official and follow the twists and turns of a controversial proposal to build an interstate natural gas pipeline through the southern part of the state. Earlier this year, she completed a three-day, six-article series about the region’s emergency medical services system being under severe strain because of financial and manpower problems. This summer, Foley became a copy editor and environment reporter for The Sentinel.

THOMAS FIEDLER

Dean, Boston University College of Communication

Thomas Fiedler began his tenure as dean of the Boston University College of Communication on June 1, 2008 following a distinguished career in journalism. After graduating from the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy with a bachelor’s degree in engineering, he earned a master’s degree in journalism at Boston University. Later, he joined the Miami Herald, where he would work for more than 30 years, as an investigative reporter, a political columnist, the editorial page editor and, finally, the executive editor, from 2001 to 2007. In 1988, Fiedler received the Society of Professional Journalists’ top award for coverage of that year’s presidential campaign highlighted by his reporting on Gary Hart’s campaign-killing affair with a Miami model. As the newspaper’s executive editor, Fiedler was a stickler for journalism ethics, particularly after reporters working for the Herald’s Spanish-language sister publication, El Nuevo Herald, were found to be on the payroll of a U.S. government-owned anti-Castro news service in 2006. Fiedler also pushed his reporters and editors to embrace the Internet as a critical means of news delivery, rather than just an appendage of the newspaper. He has also embraced new media as a Visiting Murrow Lecturer and Goldsmith Fellow at Harvard University’s Shorenstein Center on the Press, Politics and Public Policy, where he investigated the impact of the Web on the presidential primary system and taught a graduate course on the intersection of media, politics and public policy. In addition, Fiedler co-directed a project, sponsored by the Carnegie Corporation and the Knight Foundation, exploring the future of journalism education. In 2003, Fiedler received a BU College of Communication Distinguished Alumni Award, and in 2005, the college presented him with the Hugo Shong Lifetime Achievement Award in Journalism. In 2006, he was elected a member of BU’s Board of Overseers.
Josh Gerstein is the Chief Legal Affairs and Transparency Reporter for Politico, specializing in legal and national security issues. Gerstein joined the pathbreaking political news outlet just before President Barack Obama’s inauguration and has reported extensively on how Obama’s pledge to close the Guantanamo Bay prison for war-on-terror captives went awry. His articles also have explored how expectations that the Obama administration would dramatically reform the legal architecture of the Bush administration’s anti-terrorism policies have proven to be mistaken. Gerstein has covered the Supreme Court nominations of Sonia Sotomayor and Elena Kagan, the Obama administration’s little-heralded crackdown on leaks and the surprisingly icy relationship between the press and the Obama White House. From 2003 to 2008, Gerstein was The New York Sun’s national reporter and covered national politics, terrorism trials and other legal stories of national significance. He was one of few national reporters to provide in-depth coverage of the legal saga of Sami Al-Arian, a former Florida college professor who has spent nearly two decades under the scrutiny of federal prosecutors over his ties to Palestinian Islamic jihad. Gerstein also covered the trial of Lewis Libby, the Bush White House aide who was convicted on obstruction of justice charges in the investigation of the CIA leak and who later had his jail sentence commuted by the president. Gerstein worked for ABC News from 1995 to 2003. He was what has come to be called an embed on the 1996 presidential bid of former Sen. Bob Dole (R-Kansas). Gerstein later spent five years covering the White House for ABC as a producer and correspondent. He was on the White House beat during the impeachment of President Bill Clinton and when President George W. Bush faced the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. In the weeks that followed, Gerstein was among the first to report on a policy that made many immigration cases closed to the public. He also wrote for the New Republic about the Justice Department’s aggressive use of material witness warrants to detain those suspected of having ties to terrorism. Gerstein attended Harvard College and received a Bachelor’s degree, magna cum laude, in government. He’s also the author of a 1991 Massachusetts law, requiring college and university police departments to keep a public log of arrests and reported crimes. While not a lawyer, Gerstein’s an expert on the Freedom of Information Act and has pursued several lawsuits seeking records on federal contracting, allegations of abuse of detainees at Guantanamo, use of the sneak-and-peek provisions of the Patriot Act, and the government’s handling of leaks of classified information.

Rick Gagliuso has represented newspapers and other media outlets in New Hampshire since the 1980s. His work has spanned virtually the entire range of legal services required by the print and online media, including pre-publication review, advice and representation in matters related to defamation, invasion of privacy, newsgathering practices, the reporter’s privilege, access to public records and proceedings, and transactional work. He has also represented non-media clients in cases related to libel and privacy and other First Amendment issues. His work also includes commercial and industrial construction as well as general commercial, corporate, and transactional work. In addition to his law practice, he has an active mediation and arbitration practice and has served on the Construction and Commercial Panels of the American Arbitration Association. After working in larger law firms for many years, Gagliuso is currently a principal in the Merrimack law firm of Gagliuso & Gagliuso P.A. He is a past member and chair of the New Hampshire Judicial Council and currently serves on the Hearings Committee of the Attorney Discipline System. He has also served on the boards of directors or trustees of a number of trade and civic organizations, including Symphony New Hampshire. In 2000, the New Hampshire Bar Association conferred upon him its President’s Award for Special Service to the Profession and the Public.

Cindy Galli is a senior investigative producer for the ABC News Investigative Unit in New York. She specializes in consumer investigations, covering everything from ineffective product recalls to abusive debt collectors — and also heads up collaborative investigative projects between ABC and network affiliates around the country. She also oversees the popular ABC News consumer feature “The Fixer.” Galli got her start at KGO-TV in San Francisco, then moved to New York to join the investigative team at “Inside Edition.” Her consumer reporting over 23 years has garnered regional and national awards. She can be found on Twitter at @must-tangalli.

Kyle Jones joined WMTW News 8 in July 2014 and is a general assignment reporter. She comes to Maine from Maryland and is excited to trade the state’s famous crabs for lobsters. While in Maryland, Jones was a reporter and producer for WMDT in Salisbury on the beautiful Eastern Shore. She got her start in news as an intern for NBC on Capitol Hill, helping network reporters cover breaking national news, including the death of Osama bin Laden. Jones studied journalism at Hampton University, and received a master’s degree in journalism from the University of Maryland in 2012. Before her career in journalism, Jones spent nine years in public relations, talking to reporters and frequently pitching them stories. Over time, she decided she wanted to be on the other side of the phone, creating the stories she was pitching. Although she’s called Maryland home for years, she’s originally from Connecticut and has lived in Vermont. Jones is as member of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. and the National Association of Black Journalists.

Matthew Kauffman has been a reporter at The Hartford Courant since 1986 and is assigned to the paper’s investigative desk, where he works on longer-term projects, from deaths in group homes to racial profiling in traffic stops to the murky world of overseas diploma mills. He also specializes in computer-assisted reporting and serves as an advisor to the reporting staff on freedom of information issues. In 2007, Kauffman was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in Investigative Reporting for a series he co-authored on mentally ill troops sent to war. He has also received a Polk Award, the Selden Ring Award, the Worth Bingham Prize and the Heywood Broun Award, and has twice been a finalist for the Gerald Loeb Award. He was also named a “Master Reporter” by the New England Society of Newspaper Editors. Outside the paper, Kauffman has taught college classes in data journalism and investigative reporting.

KRISTEN LOMBARDI
Reporter, Center for Public Integrity

Kristen Lombardi is an award-winning journalist who works for the nonprofit investigative organization, Center for Public Integrity in Washington, D.C., covering environmental and social justice issues. She has been a journalist for more than 20 years. Her investigation into the Environmental Protection Agency’s lackluster civil-rights record for the Center won the top investigative prize from the Society for Professional Journalists and a special citation by Columbia University’s Paul Tobenkin Award, among other recognition. Before the Center, Lombardi was an investigative reporter for the Village Voice, where she provided groundbreaking coverage of the 9/11 health crisis. Her investigative reports as a staff writer for the Boston Phoenix were widely credited with helping to expose the clergy sex-abuse scandal in that city. Her work for the Center has received national and regional awards, including the Robert F. Kennedy Award, the Dart Award and the Sigma Delta Chi Award for Public Service. Lombardi was a Nieman Fellow at Harvard Law School in Los Angeles, the University of North Carolina School of Journalism at Chapel Hill and the University of California at Berkeley and has a master’s degree in journalism from Boston University. Currently, she serves as an adjunct master’s adviser and professor at Columbia University’s Graduate School of Journalism.

JENIFER MCKIM
Reporter, New England Center for Investigative Reporting

Jenifer McKim is a senior investigative reporter and senior trainer at The Eye at the New England Center for Investigative Reporting. Her stories on child fatalities and the Massachusetts Department of Children and Families were awarded a 2014 and 2016 Publick Occurrences award from the New England Newspaper and Press Association as well as a 2016 Freedom of Information Award from the New England First Amendment Coalition. In 2015, she was awarded a Publick Occurrences award for her stories on homeowner debt following the Great Depression. Before joining NECIR in September, 2013, McKim worked as a social issues and business reporter at The Boston Globe. There she received a 2011 Casey Medal for Meritorious Journalism for a story on domestic sex trafficking of minors and a 2nd place nod for the 2013 Casey Medal chronicling a federal investigation into a global child pornography network. McKim was a 2008 Fellow at the Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard University and is a graduate of Wesleyan University in Connecticut. She started her journalism career at The San Juan Star in Puerto Rico.

WESLEY LOWERY
Reporter, The Washington Post

Wesley Lowery is a national reporter who covers law enforcement, justice, race and politics. He previously covered Congress and national politics. Prior to joining the Washington Post in February 2014, he worked as a breaking news and local politics reporter for The Boston Globe and has also reported for the Los Angeles Times and the Wall Street Journal. In 2014, he was named the National Association of Black Journalists’ “Emerging Journalist of the Year.” Follow him on Twitter @WesleyLowery.

AMANDA MILKOVITS
The Providence Journal

Amanda Milkovits is a reporter at The Providence Journal, where she has covered crime and justice stories since 2000. She has won recognition and awards for articles about high-profile issues including sex trafficking, gang slayings and the impact of gun violence. She is accustomed to battling police agencies over public records, including The Journal’s attempt to obtain records of the state police investigation of the governor’s son’s underage drinking party. Milkovits holds a bachelor’s degree in journalism from Keene State College and a master’s degree in writing from Rivier University in New Hampshire. Milkovits has been a fellow at the Journalist Law School at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles, the University of North Carolina School of Media and Journalism’s “Reporting Sex Trafficking conference and the New England First Amendment Institute.

RAYMOND A. MARCACCIO
Attorney, Oliverio & Marcaccio, LLP

Raymond A. Marcaccio is the co-founder of Oliverio & Marcaccio LLP. Marcaccio enjoys a varied practice in trial and appellate advocacy, as well as conducting sensitive internal investigations concerning misconduct, discrimination and sexual harassment. He has been representing the news media for over 20 years in all facets of media law, including pre-publication review, access to public records and meetings, and defending against defamation claims. Marcaccio is a recipient of the Public Justice Achievement Award from the Trial Lawyers for Public Justice. This national award is given out annually to lawyers who have made a significant contribution in the field of civil rights. He was appointed by the governor to serve on the Commission on Judicial Tenure and Discipline, which oversees the conduct of all members of the judicial branch for the State of Rhode Island.

ERIC MOSKOWITZ
Reporter, The Boston Globe

Eric Moskowitz is a metro reporter for The Boston Globe, specializing in features and enterprise projects. His 2014 story uncovering the long trail of violence, without consequences, that preceded Jared Remy’s murder of Jennifer Martel was a finalist for the IRE Tom Renner Award. He also finished second in the 2015 National Headliner Awards (for feature writing on a variety of subjects by an individual), for the second consecutive year. Prior to recently aging out, he was a two-time finalist for the Livingston Award for Young Journalists. A member of the Globe staff since 2007, Moskowitz contributed to the paper’s Pulitzer Prize-winning coverage of the 2013 attack on the Boston Marathon. He landed the first interview with the Chinese start-up entrepreneur carjacked by the Tsarnaev brothers, and in the years since he has written a series of stories about survivors of the bombing. He previously covered suburban news and breaking news and spent three years on the transportation beat, where he tried with limited success to find time for fun slice-of-life stories (a day in the life of an MBTA customer service representative, a ride-along in the annual bus driver competition known as the “Roadeo”) amid the daily grind of chronicling failing infrastructure and budget deficits. A native of Needham, Mass., and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Moskowitz started as a sports writer, covering the Cape League in 2000 as an intern for the Cape Cod Times. Reassigned to news the next summer as an Arizona Republic intern, he discovered the pleasure of writing about life beyond the press box, though he still sometimes writes about sports.

SHAWN MUSGRAVE
Reporter, New England Center for Investigative Reporting (formerly)

Shawn Musgrave is a Boston-based investigative reporter whose work has appeared in The Boston Globe, Politico, Vice, and The Marshall Project, among other publications. His work focuses primarily on criminal justice and government transparency, and, more recently, investigation of political discourse via social media manipulation. Two of his current projects are supported by the Fund for Investigative Reporting and the Nation Institute’s Investigative Fund. A former New England First Amendment Institute Fellow, he is a graduate of Boston University and the Lede Program at Columbia University’s Graduate School of Journalism.

ERIC RASMUSSEN
Investigative Reporter, Boston 25 News

Eric Rasmussen called Boston home during college at Boston University and is grateful his adventure in TV news has taken him back to the Bay State and Boston 25 News. Rasmussen reported and anchored for TV stations in Chico, Calif., Champaign, Ill., Fresno, Calif., Orlando, Fla., and San Francisco before returning to Boston. He has received recognition over the years, including multiple Emmy, Murrow, and Associated Press awards, but has also been threatened, had a dog “sliced” on him, and was even once called a “pea brain” by a city councilperson. All of it has better prepared Rasmussen for his job as an investigative reporter. Rasmussen’s first thought that he might want to pursue a career in TV news came after a speech and debate tournament in high school. In a review of his speech about the physics of baseball, a judge wrote “I felt like I was watching a TV news report!” Once Rasmussen came to terms with the reality that he would not be a professional baseball player, he focused on school and graduated summa cum laude from Boston University with a degree in broadcast journalism. Some of his most rewarding stories include uncovering questionable spending of public money by a former Port of Oakland official as well as exposing unsafe and unsanitary conditions at a large hotel, prompting changes to help long-term residents. Rasmussen’s reporting has also taken him to Sweden (to investigate some of the toughest drunk driving laws in the world), Spain (to study high speed rail) and the Panama Canal. When he’s not in front of the camera at Boston 25, Rasmussen can often be found behind the turntables, pursuing his other passion as a DJ. Rasmussen fell in love with hip-hop music as a kid in the 80’s and has collected hundreds of records since then. He is his own reminder that you can’t always judge a book by its cover.

MIKE REZENDES
Investigative Reporter, The Boston Globe

Mike Rezendes is a Pulitzer Prize-winning investigative reporter and political writer for The Boston Globe. Since joining the Globe he has played a key role in many of its most significant investigations, including those probing the September 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, financial corruption in the nation’s charitable foundations, and the plight of mentally ill state prisoners. As a member of the Globe Spotlight Team, he shared a 2003 Pulitzer Prize for investigating the cover-up of sexual abuse in the Catholic Church. Rezendes and the Spotlight Team were also Pulitzer Prize finalists for a series of stories on unscrupulous debt collectors. More recently, Rezendes exposed the deaths of three mental health patients at Bridgewater State Hospital due to the illegal use of isolation and restraints. His stories resulted in reforms, the appointment of a new commissioner at the Department of Correction and criminal indictments against three prison guards who stood accused of killing a patient.

SIGMUND D. SCHUTZ
Partner, PretiFlaherty

Sigmund D. Schutz represents the news media in First Amendment matters, defamation and privacy, state and federal freedom of information, news gathering and cyber law. As a partner at PretiFlaherty, LLP and media law counsel for the Portland Press Herald/Maine Sunday Telegram for nearly 20 years, Schutz has served as counsel in many precedent setting public access cases in Maine, including access to transcripts of 911 calls, the right to attend jury selection in criminal cases in Maine state court, access to “draft” settlement agreements to which the State of Maine is a party, access to dash cam police cruiser video, and access to records of closed law enforcement investigations. Schutz writes the Maine chapters in the Media Law Resource Center’s 50-state guide to media libel law and privacy law and the Maine Chapter in the Open Government Guide published by the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press. Schutz is admitted to practice law in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and New York and is a graduate of Colby College and Cornell Law School.

New England First Amendment Coalition

In his 42 years in journalism James H. Smith served as president of the New England Society of Newspaper Editors, president of the Connecticut Associated Press Managing Editors Association and, most recently, president of the non-profit Connecticut Council on Freedom of Information. He retired from daily journalism in 2010 and was inducted two years later into the New England Newspaper Hall of Fame. He has served as city editor and sports editor of the Hartford Courant and editor of the Connecticut Post. He led the Post to its first New England Newspaper of the Year Award. He also led The Day of New London, The News-Times of Danbury, the Record-Journal of Meriden and the New Britain Herald to their first New England Newspaper of the Year awards. He won the American Society of Newspaper Editors’ Distinguished Writing Award for a selection of his columns on First Amendment, which were published in “Best Newspaper Writing 2003” put out annually by the Poynter Institute. He is a recipient of the Yankee Quill Award from the Academy of New England journalists and is a four-time winner of the First Amendment Award from the Connecticut Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists. Plaidswee Publishing of Concord, NH, published a collection of Smith’s columns under the title “A Passion for Journalism, A Newspaper Editor Writes to His Readers.” His two novels, “Wah-say-lan, A Tale of the Iroquois in the American Revolution,” and the YA edition “Wah-say-lan, Seneca Warrior,” were also published by Plaidswee. His fourth book, “A Boy’s Life in the Baby Boom,” a memoir about his baby-booming childhood, will be published next month by Elm Grove Press of Mystic Conn. He earned his master’s degree in humanities/writing from Wesleyan University, studied at Syracuse University Graduate School of Journalism and has a B.A. in American History from SUNY Brockport.

Susan Spencer covers regional Worcester County news as well as health, investigative and environmental issues for the Worcester Telegram & Gazette. She has worked for the daily newspaper as a staff reporter for six years plus an additional five years as a freelance correspondent. Before becoming a journalist, Spencer worked in the health policy and nonprofit management fields. Besides being a 2016 New England First Amendment Institute Fellow, she was a 2015 Fellow in the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts Foundation Health Coverage Fellowship. Spencer has received numerous journalism awards, including being named 2014 Reporter of the Year for Daily Newspapers by the New England Newspaper & Press Association and sharing a NENPA Publick Occurrences Award with a colleague for a series on the cost of meningitis traced to a specialty pharmacy in Framingham. He has won a number of other awards, including first place from the national Education Writers Association and Association of Health Care Journalists, as well as a “Laurel” from the Columbia Journalism Review. Wallack, a graduate of Northwestern University, has worked for The Boston Globe’s Spotlight Team, specializing in data journalism, public records and financial reporting. Wallack was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in 2013 for his work covering the deadly outbreak of meningitis traced to a specialty pharmacy in Framingham. He has won a number of other awards, including first place from the national Education Writers Association and Association of Health Care Journalists, as well as a “Laurel” from the Columbia Journalism Review. Wallack, a graduate of Northwestern University, has worked for The Boston Globe since 2007. He has spent much of his career as a business reporter and previously worked for the San Francisco Chronicle, Boston Herald, Boston Business Journal, Network World, and the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News. He lives with his wife in Somerville, Mass.

He lives with his wife in Somerville, Mass.
Nancy West founded the nonprofit New Hampshire Center for Public Interest Journalism in 2015. West is the executive editor of the center’s online investigative news website InDepthNH.org, which is rapidly growing in readers and supporters. During her many years as a reporter/editor at the New Hampshire Union Leader, she won many awards for investigative reporting. She uncovered and put a halt to a secret file docketing system at the New Hampshire Supreme Court. She also exposed a secretive, broken system in New Hampshire that is supposed to make sure defendants are notified before dishonest police officers testify against them. Because of her reporting, three murderers were notified 20 years after their convictions that prosecutors had failed to do so, opening the door for them to seek a new trial. And the Attorney General’s Office recently unveiled a new statewide policy — albeit still secret — to identify officers who have been disciplined for dishonesty and how to notify defendants before trial. She received a Fund for Investigative Journalism grant to investigate the problem nationally, which revealed that most states are also protecting police personnel files at the expense of defendants’ constitutional right to all of the evidence in their favor, which can — and does — cause convictions to be overturned when such failures are finally discovered. Since launching InDepthNH.org, West has exposed troubling conditions at the state prison Secure Psychiatric Unit where difficult to manage mentally ill patients from the state hospital are locked even though they haven’t committed a crime. West teaches investigative journalism at the New England Center for Investigative Reporting’s summer program at Boston University and frequently speaks to college journalism classes. West is passionate about holding government accountable, giving voice to marginalized people, places and ideas and training the next generation of journalists.

BROOKE WILLIAMS
Associate Professor of the Practice of Computational Journalism, Boston University

Brooke Williams is an award-winning investigative journalist who specializes in data-driven reporting and storytelling. She is a freelance reporter, clinical professor of data journalism at Boston University and a contributor to The New York Times. An investigation she co-authored for the Times won the Pulitzer Prize for Investigative Reporting in 2014. This year, she and her co-reporters at the Times published a two-part series, Think Tanks Inc. Prior to joining the faculty at Boston University’s College of Communication, Williams was a senior investigative reporter and senior trainer at The Eye and the New England Center for Investigative Reporting. In 2012, Williams began three years as an investigative journalism Fellow at Harvard University, where she first launched an investigation into think tanks and how their relationships with foreign governments and corporations influence public policy and opinion. Williams graduated from the Missouri School of Journalism in December 2001 and began her career in January 2002 at the Center for Public Integrity, where she co-authored and reported Harmful Error: Investigating Americas Local Prosecutors, The Buying of the President 2004, a best-selling book, and Windfalls of War, an investigation into defense contracts that won a George Polk Award. In 2004, she joined the watchdog team at the San Diego Union-Tribune, where she was a finalist for the Livingston Award for Young Journalists for stories examining how the city mishandled public land. In 2007, after massive wildfires in San Diego, her investigation into emergency contractors resulted in a federal criminal probe and taxpayer settlement. In 2009, she joined inewsource in San Diego as an investigative reporter, where her story about a newspaper owner and developer was a finalist for the Investigative Reporters and Editors award. In 2012, she accepted an investigative journalism Fellowship with the Lab@Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics at Harvard University. In 2014, she joined the Project on Public Narrative at Harvard as an investigative journalism Fellow, where she launched a nationwide investigation of federal prosecutors. Williams launched the first searchable database of foreign government contributions to major U.S. think tanks.

STEVEN WILMSEN
Narrative Editor, The Boston Globe

Steven Wilmsen edits and coaches narrative writing at the Boston Globe. His projects have won awards including the American Society of Newspaper Editors’ Deborah Howell Award for Writing Excellence, the Scripps Howard Ernie Pyle Award for Human Interest Storytelling, the Dart Award, National Headliner Award, Casey Medal and Knight Award for Public Service. Numerous projects have appeared in anthologies, including The Best American Newspaper Narratives, The Best American Science and Nature Writing and The Best American Sports Writing. Wilmsen has taught narrative writing in a variety of settings and co-writes a Pointer column, Coaches’ Corner, for editors of narrative journalism. He was a 2012 USC Annenberg Health Journalism Fellow and is author of a book, Silverado: Neil Bush and the Savings & Loan Crisis. With colleagues, Wilmsen shares the 2014 Pulitzer Prize for Breaking News for coverage of the Boston Marathon bombing.

ABIGAIL W. ADAMS
Reporter, The Lincoln County News (formerly)

Abigail W. Adams is a freelance writer, researcher and investigative reporter. She is committed to the principles of participatory democracy, objective journalism and informing the citizenry. Her story interests span international affairs, national security, climate change, government and corporate malfeasance, health and wellness, and hope and healing. For the past three years, Adams has worked as a general assignment reporter for The Lincoln County News where she covered municipal and county government, breaking news, courts and crime, business, and feature stories. Her work has also appeared in “The Jewish Ledger,” “The Motley Fool,” and “The Jerusalem Report.” She is the founder of The Information Collective, informationcollective.org — a neglected passion project focused on using unique multi-media platforms to deconstruct dense information on pressing policy issues for the citizenry. She inherited her love of journalism from her father, James Ring Adams. Adams and her father are currently working together to update and republish his book The Big Fix: Inside the S&L Scandal. The upcoming Big Fix Remix will apply the recipe for financial disaster James Ring Adams wrote about in 1991 to the Global Financial Crisis of 2008. The project aims to raise the red flag about other industries where the same conditions for financial meltdown exist.

2017 JAMES W. FOLEY SCHOLAR

CAITLIN ANDREWS
Reporter, Concord Monitor

Born and raised in New Hampshire’s Lakes Region, Caitlin Andrews has always had a desire to write. Over time, that desire has mostly manifested itself into nonfiction and a mixture of feature writing and investigative journalism. A University of New Hampshire graduate, she got her start in news at Seacoast Media Group’s “Portsmouth Herald” as an intern for the features department and later was hired to cover the city of Rochester and its surrounding communities at Foster’s Daily Democrat. There, she spanned the spectrum of local daily news writing and was introduced to political writing during the course of the 2016 presidential primary season. Andrews landed at the Concord Monitor just before the 2016 general elections and has been all over the state ever since. She continues to develop her passion for telling local stories in a big way, and believes strongly in the value of careful storytelling and relationship building. If she had to choose, she would say agriculture, social issues, crime and nature writing are her favorite categories, although she enjoys the challenge of writing about subjects outside her comfort zone.

COLLIN BINKLEY
Reporter, The Associated Press

Collin Binkley is a reporter for The Associated Press in Boston. As part of the AP’s national education team, Binkley reports on topics including student debt, Title IX, international education and the for-profit college industry. He has used public records to produce accountability stories on a variety of issues, including university endowment investments and the spread of semi-automatic rifles among campus police forces. Binkley previously worked at The Columbus Dispatch in Ohio, where he was part of a team that won the 2015 Eugene S. Pulliam First Amendment Award for reporting on the secrecy surrounding campus disciplinary systems. He’s a graduate of Ohio State University and a native Ohioan.

KATE BRAMSON
Reporter, Providence Journal

Kate Bramson joined The Providence Journal as a reporter in August 2002. For the last seven years, she has covered the Rhode Island economy and efforts to fix it. She examines labor force data, finds people behind unemployment figures, follows state efforts to develop vacant former highway land in the heart of Providence, delves deeply into baseball stadium financing and examines economic-development competition among states to lure companies across borders. After 24 years as a journalist, Bramson has covered a variety of other topics — drunken-driving laws, teen sexual assault, race relations and breaking news. She has worked as a key team member on several year-long reporting initiatives at The Providence Journal. In 2012, Bramson’s work kicked off The Journal’s Reinvent Rhode Island series with an extensive look at the economy, the jobs lost during the Great Recession, the people hit hardest by those losses and the state’s assets and efforts to turn things around. That series won the 2012 Sevellon Brown Public Service Award from the New England Associated Press News Executives Association. Bramson’s coverage of a federal prosecutor who asked for special treatment after he was stopped by the police for erratic driving and suspicion of drunken-driving won the 2010 Sevellon Brown Public Service Award and placed second in NEAPNEA’s investigative reporting category. Bramson’s 2003 story “Rape in a Small Town” won the 2004 Dart Award for Excellence in Reporting on Victims of Violence from the Dart Center for Journalism & Trauma.

STEPHEN BUSEMEYER
Editor, The Hartford Courant

Stephen Busemeyer joined the The Hartford Courant’s editorial board in the spring of 2016 after 16 years in various roles at The Courant. From 2009 to 2014, he was The Courant’s breaking news editor, during which time The Courant won the 2011 American Society of News Editors’ Jesse Laventhol Award for Deadline News Reporting for its coverage of the Hartford Distributors

NEFAC established the James W. Foley Scholarship in February 2015 to honor the slain journalist and New Hampshire native. The scholarship provides funding for one Fellow to attend the institute without travel or lodging expenses. Previous recipients are Katie Jickling of the Herald of Randolph (Vt.) in 2016 and Nate Holst of WMTW-TV in Maine in 2015.

Amanda Drane is a Western Massachusetts journalist who has won awards for her reporting on issues of race and policing and injustice in the restaurant industry. She recently began working as a reporter for The Berkshire Eagle and got her professional start at the Valley Advocate. More recently, she worked for the Daily Hampshire Gazette, where she reported a multi-part investigative series on undocumented restaurant workers that won a 2017 Publick Occurrences Award from the New England Newspaper & Press Association.

CHARLES EICHACKER
Staff Writer, Kennebec Journal

Charles Eichacker is a staff writer at the Kennebec Journal, a daily newspaper in Augusta, Maine. Besides his primary beats of breaking news and public safety, he covers local government, health and a tiny bit of everything else. He has also taught English in China as a U.S. Peace Corp volunteer.

CALLIE FERGUSON
Reporter, Bangor Daily News

Callie Ferguson is reporter about to join the metro desk at the Bangor Daily News in Bangor Maine. Before moving to Bangor, she lived in Portland, Me., and wrote for the Forecaster, a weekly newspaper in the Greater Portland area. She covered the coastal towns of Brunswick and Harpswell, reporting municipal, school, environmental, and community news. She particularly enjoyed writing about the area’s historic fishing industry, business redevelopment on the former Brunswick U.S. Naval Air Station, and local manifestations of state and nation-wide trends and attitudes; two of her stories were recently awarded first place prizes by the Maine Press Association. The intimacy of local news has been a helpful and rewarding experience, especially in the formative years of her career in journalism. She had the unique pleasure of covering her alma mater, Bowdoin College, where she earned a degree in English in 2015 and wrote a beer column.

ALICIA FREESE
Reporter, Seven Days

After graduating from Pomona College with an international relations degree, Alicia Freese worked for ReThink Media, a communications nonprofit that assists organizations working to safeguard civil liberties. Freese returned to her home state of Vermont in 2012 to start her journalism career at the online news site, VTDigger, where she covered the state legislature. Since 2014, she’s worked as a reporter at Seven Days, an alt-weekly in Burlington. She currently writes about state politics, mental health, health care, and whatever else comes her way. When not reporting, she’s usually out running.

TOMMY GARDNER
News Editor, Stowe Reporter

Tommy Gardner moved to Vermont at five years of age from the Detroit metropolitan area. He lived in Lamoille County from first grade through college, with all the hiking, biking, snowboarding, saxophone playing and general mischief that can be expected from a rural Vermont kid. Although he still cheers for the Tigers, Lions, Red Wings and Pistons, he has given up calling soda “pop.” After a brief post-college stint as a newspaper correspondent for the Burlington Free Press and Hardwick Gazette, Gardner headed out on a road trip that ended up lasting about four years, with a healthy dose of bartending and ski-bumming. Moving back home for a full-time reporting job at the Gazette, Gardner cut his teeth on every beat out there — cops and courts, public works and politics, education and energy, agriculture and food, sports and recreation. The Gazette’s annual April Fools edition was must-read fake news decades before today’s “fake news.” Gardner transitioned to the Stowe Reporter, where he continued to evolve his reporting chops, earning the Vermont Press Association’s Mavis Doyle award in 2016, generally seen as the VPA’s highest honor. He has also received numerous awards from the New England Newspaper & Press Association. Gardner was recently promoted to news editor of the Stowe Reporter family of newspapers, which includes the Waterbury Record and the News & Citizen of Morrisville. Now, he spends half his time writing, half his time working with green reporters, half his time editing, and the other half trying to do better at math.

DEREK GOMES
Reporter, The Newport Daily News

Derek Gomes is a native of Charlotte, N.C. and a journalist for just short of five years. Gomes has always been interested in print journalism. As a high school student, he would wake up every day to the The Charlotte Observer and worked for the high school newspaper for three years. Gomes graduated from the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, Mass., with a bachelor’s degree after majoring in English and history. Skeptical whether a career in print journalism would prove sustainable, Gomes taught high school English in New Orleans. Realizing that was not his calling, Gomes was fortunate to get a job reporting for a weekly newspaper, The South County Independent, covering Narragansett, R.I. With his mother and sister living in the Ocean State, Rhode Island became his second home. Though green at the outset, Gomes learned how to cover municipal government, breaking news and features during his time there. He then worked at The Winchester Star, a six-day daily newspaper, in Winchester, Va. Gomes covered a city of 30,000 and began editing copy during his last year with the company. During the last 12 months, Gomes has been back in Rhode Island working for the company where he got his start in journalism, now covering Portsmouth for The Newport Daily News. Getting to the bottom of matters, especially those that are controversial, and informing the public about them is one of his favorite parts of the job. Outside of work, Gomes is an avid Carolina Panthers fan and a proud uncle of a niece and nephew.

MELISSA HANSON
Reporter, MassLive

Melissa Hanson is a reporter for MassLive. She is based in Worcester, Mass., and reports on statewide news, including breaking news, courts and feature stories. Her important work includes co-authoring a series on the state of untested rape kits in Massachusetts; a profile of the people who live and work in Worcester’s Main South neighborhood; and a look at internal affairs investigations for police officers in Middlesex County. Hanson has previously worked at The Lowell Sun and as a correspondent for The Boston Globe. She was editor-in-chief of The Suffolk Journal at Suffolk University. Hanson is a lifelong Massachusetts resident. She has lived in Worcester, East Boston and Tewksbury, Mass. In her free time, Hanson enjoys nature walks, dancing, cooking and wine tasting. She is an animal lover who wishes her landlord would let her have a dog.

CASEY MCDERMOTT
Reporter, New Hampshire Public Radio

Casey McDermott covers politics and policy for New Hampshire Public Radio, with a focus on election law, health policy and the opioid epidemic. Prior to joining NHPR in 2015, she reported for the Concord Monitor — where she wrote about everything from local debates over cemetery ownership, to the escapades of aspiring presidential candidates, to an escaped emu.
Before that, she held internships at the Student Press Law Center, ProPublica and the Chronicle of Higher Education. McDermott studied journalism and sociology at Penn State but spent most of her days (and nights) in the newsroom of its independent student newspaper, The Daily Collegian. There, she directed coverage of the Sandusky scandal and other campus issues. The Collegian received national acclaim for its work during her term as managing editor and editor-in-chief.

HILARY NILES
Reporter

Hilary Niles produces narrative, investigative and data-driven journalism for public radio, print and online publications. As an independent journalist based in northern Vermont, Niles also consults with newsrooms nationwide to help them manage data efficiently. Her reporting focuses on economic and community development to expose the sources of socioeconomic inequality and identify solutions for overcoming generational poverty. Her clients include Vermont Public Radio, NPR, BBC and the Boston Globe. She’s currently engaged in a grant-funded project through the Sunlight Foundation to develop a database of Donald Trump’s conflicts of interest. Niles serves as a member of the Society of Professional Journalists’ Freedom of Information Committee and secretary of SPJ’s Freelance Community. In 2017, Niles launched an effort to connect journalists across mediums in Vermont. Their first initiative, to support adoption of a state shield law, secured equal protections for all organizations and individuals engaged in journalism — whether legacy media outlets, digital publications, freelancers, students or citizens. The ad hoc group is now working toward state public records reforms, in conjunction with non-journalist allies and other stakeholders. Her research into measuring the impact of nonprofit news, conducted with Charles Lewis of the Investigative Reporting Workshop, earned the Sigma Delta Chi award in 2013. She’s a member of SPJ, Investigative Reporters and Editors, the National Freedom of Information Coalition, the Solutions Journalism Network and the National Press Club. She’s an alumna of the University of New Hampshire, the Salt Institute for Documentary Studies and the Missouri School of Journalism. Before turning her journalism hobby into a career, Niles helped found Portsmouth Community Radio, a low-power FM community radio station on the Seacoast of New Hampshire. She also worked as a marketing consultant for artists, nonprofits and small businesses and previously as a bartender and farmer.

BRAD PETRISHEN
Reporter, Worcester Telegram & Gazette

Brad Petrishen has been a journalist in Massachusetts for nine years. Currently a general assignment reporter for the Worcester Telegram & Gazette, he has in the past reported for the MetroWest Daily News and Winchester Star, among others, and served as editor-in-chief at The Gatepost student newspaper at Framingham State University. A Tewksbury, Mass., native, Petrishen has been recognized by the New England Newspaper & Press Association nine times since 2014, including second-place awards for investigative and right-to-know reporting and a first-place award for spot news.

DIANA PINZON
Reporter, WPRI-Providence

Diana Pinzon is the Investigative & Special Projects Producer at WPRI-TV in Providence, R.I. She has worked at the CBS affiliate since 2004 when she was hired as an associate producer. She quickly rose up the ranks to producer and eventually senior producer — spearheading coverage and training new hires — before making a major shift to her current position where she works on enterprise projects and investigations. Her role is multi-faceted, working as a multi-media journalist: shooting video, editing stories, conducting interviews and writing reports for both broadcast and online. In 2014, she was awarded an Associated Press Award for Best Newscast and was nominated for a New England Emmy in the same category. She is also a proud member of the National Association of Hispanic Journalists. Recently, Pinzon worked several major stories including the 2016 presidential election, the Aaron Hernandez prison suicide, and was a field producer for the Patriots Super Bowl LI victory rally.

GREG RYAN
Reporter, Boston Business Journal

Greg Ryan is a reporter for the Boston Business Journal, where he covers the financial services and legal industries and public policy. He was part of a team of BBJ reporters that won a Society of American Business Editors and Writers award in 2016 for the publication’s coverage of Boston’s bid for the 2024 Olympics. Prior to the BBJ, Ryan worked as a reporter and editor for Law360 in New York City and Hudson Valley magazine in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. He is a graduate of Ithaca College. Ryan lives in Boston with his wife and infant daughter.

MARTHA SHANAHAN
Reporter, The Day

Martha covers health and environment issues for The Day. A graduate of Tufts University, she has worked as a reporter in several New England states and in her hometown of Washington, D.C. Before coming to The Day she covered city government and the 2016 presidential primary at the Keene Sentinel in Keene, NH.

ADAM SILVERMAN
Reporter, Burlington Free Press

Adam Silverman is a content coach and news reporter at the Burlington Free Press. A University of Missouri graduate, he has worked at the Free Press since 2000. Silverman began as a reporter covering local communities and then worked the crime and courts beat for several years. He joined the editing team in 2009, became associate editor in 2013 and content strategist a year later. As a reporter, Silverman covers trending topics including open government and accountability, the National Guard and local nonprofits.
Away from the office, Silverman can be found traveling Vermont’s back roads taking photos, especially in the fall, or acting in local theater productions — where he’s played everything from a murder victim in the Sondheim musical “Sweeney Todd” to Lt. J.G. Daniel Kaffee in Aaron Sorkin’s drama “A Few Good Men.”

GREG SUKIEJNIK
Managing Editor,
New England Newspapers

As Vermont managing editor for New England Newspapers, Inc., Greg Sukienik oversees production and personnel for the Bennington Banner and Brattleboro Reformer, published daily, and the weekly Manchester Journal. He joined NENI as editor of the Journal in October of 2016 and was appointed Vermont managing editor in July. From 2005-15, Sukienik was a general editor at ESPN.com, where he helped produce web pages for the “30 for 30” films, The ESPYS and Jimmy V Week, worked with national columnists and edited and published breaking news as a news desk editor. As a newsman from 2000-05 at The Associated Press in Boston, Sukienik helped cover the Sept. 11 attacks, the child sexual abuse crisis in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, the hunt for fugitive gangster James “Whitey” Bulger and the first World Series championship won by the Boston Red Sox in 86 years. At The Berkshire Eagle from 1995-2000, Sukienik shared in honors from the New England Newspaper and Press Association and the Associated Press for the newspaper’s coverage of PCB contamination in Pittsfield and negotiations between local officials, state and federal regulators and General Electric Co. to clean up PCBs in the Housatonic River and re-use the former GE Heavy Transformer industrial site. A 1993 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Sukienik is married and has a daughter.

PAIGE SUTHERLAND
Reporter,
New Hampshire Public Radio

Paige Sutherland is a reporter at New Hampshire Public Radio in Concord, N.H. She covers the southern tier of the state and also has a heavy focus on the state’s ongoing opioid crisis. But during her two-and-a-half years at NHPR, Sutherland has been one of the lead State House reporters and actively covered the last presidential election from the Granite State. Before working at NHPR, she reported at WBUR in Boston, was a freelance political reporter for WATD in Marshfield, Mass., and a general assignment reporter at the Boston bureau of The Associated Press. While getting her master’s degree in journalism at Northwestern University, she reported extensively in Chicago, Washington, D.C. as well as South Africa. Her reporting has been seen and heard in numerous publications including NPR, The Atlantic and The Washington Post. Last year she was accepted to a three-week fellowship to Germany where she wrote and produced a four-part series on the country’s drug policies and how N.H. can learn from them. For that series, Sutherland was given the RIAS Fellowship Award and was given the opportunity to fly to Berlin to go receive it. Sutherland is a proud graduate of Holy Cross in Worcester, Mass., where she studied philosophy, something her parents were very happy about. When she’s not reporting, you can probably catch her listening to podcasts about murder — yes, murder. She’s kind of obsessed with true crime.

The Academy of New England Journalists

Proud sponsor of
The New England First Amendment Institute

Congratulations to the 2017 First Amendment Institute fellows, who are among the very best and brightest journalists in our six-state region.

The first-class training provided at the Institute is an investment in New England’s newsrooms. There has never been a more critical time for journalists to dig deep in order to keep those in power honest and accountable to the voters and taxpayers. That’s what organizations like NEFAC and the Academy are all about.

William B. Ketter, Chairman
Academy of New England Journalists

Founded in 1960, the Academy of New England Journalists honors -- with the Yankee Quill Award -- those journalists from the region who have made extraordinary contributions to a free press and the welfare of their communities. Each year the Academy’s Selection Committee, which is comprised of past Quill winners and representatives of New England journalism organizations, select recipients of the award.

The Yankee Quill is the highest honor bestowed on journalists in our region, recognizing the lifetime achievement of those who have had a broad influence for good, both inside and outside the newsroom.

How You Can Support NEFAC

The New England First Amendment Coalition provides a unique opportunity for you to help keep government accountable and journalism thriving. NEFAC was formed in 2006 by a group of journalists concerned that citizens, to say nothing of reporters, are routinely denied access to the work of government. Our founders saw a need for a unified, region-wide organization that would speak in one robust voice throughout New England. With the support of individuals like you, NEFAC is making strides.

We need your help sustaining the effort. Thank you for your support.
